

MARAÚ PENINSULA - BAHIA

Situated between the Dende and Cocoa Coasts and between the main cities of Ilhéus and Salvador, the Maraú Peninsula is an environmental protection area with lush flora and fauna of rich biodiversity. With over 40km of semi-deserted beaches, Taipu de Fora beach, with its natural pools, is considered one of the most beautiful in Brazil. The landscape is completely transformed with the variation of the moon and the tides where dozens of natural pools form during low tide, with plenty of fish and marine life that arise in coral reefs. Not only by the beaches people are attracted to Maraú, but also by its freshwater lakes, rainforests, mangrove protected areas (the largest in Brazil) and by the small villages. Barra Grande is the largest village of the peninsula, but still preserves the simplicity of the local population.
